June SPOTLIGHT:

Lean Office Methods and Optimization

Lean operations have been around for decades and many companies have applied them with great success. Most organizations may not realize that lean concepts also apply outside the manufacturing floor. Lean operations have a direct application to the transactional environment of the office workforce on a daily basis. Most, if not all, lean principles and methods can be utilized to optimize processes and procedures within companies large and small. At the foundation of lean is waste elimination, which includes reducing wasted time, money, resources, and effort.

Coming up this summer the Employee Training Institute (ETI) will be offering several Lean Office half-day seminars to introduce these continuous improvement concepts and tools to interested professionals. Contact ETI at 661-362-3245 or visit our website at <http://www.canyonsecondev.org/businessunits/eti> for more information.
